

South African-born Daron Keet is an award-winning Los Angeles-based cinematographer, who moves seamlessly between commercials and features. He began his career in South Africa on The Gods Must Be Crazy II, and then went on to assist Velocity Film's director Keith Rose on award-winning spots in the early 90s. He continued honing his craft on international features, assisting Academy Award-winning cinematographer Vilmos Zsigmond on The Ghost and The Darkness. Daron enjoys collaborations that seek to capture those un-recreatable "lighting in a bottle" moments; those happy accidents that result in cinematic magic. His in-the-moment approach ensures a blend of stylistically crafted coverage, swiftly found handheld compositions, and abstract macro textures. He is a bokeh fanatic who utilizes circular aperture-bladed lenses to produce creamy out-of-focus shapes, and aesthetically circular highlights. When not working he spends time with his wife and kids, and plays squash with friends. He is able to work as a local in Los Angeles, Denver, New York, Minnesota and South Africa.
